

USE DRONES FOR YOUR BUSINESS? HERE ARE MUST-HAVE COVERAGES.

Many businesses use unmanned aircraft (drones) to perform services. From engineers surveying land to retail businesses testing drone use for delivering products. But there are risks associated with using drones.

If you're using a drone in your business – or are considering it – you need insurance coverage that helps protect your business if:

- The drone is damaged
- The drone causes injury or property damage

COVERAGES TO HELP PROTECT YOUR BUSINESS

Consider these examples of the risks involved with using drones – and how The Hartford's property and liability coverage for unmanned aircraft can help protect your business.

THE RISK: PROPERTY DAMAGE

While a realtor is using a drone to shoot aerial views of properties he has for sale, a gust of wind carries the drone into a nearby tree, damaging it.

THE SOLUTION: OUR PROPERTY COVERAGE

The Hartford's unmanned aircraft property coverage can help repair or replace your drone damaged by a covered cause of loss. This valuable protection covers you up to the policy's business personal property limit.¹

THE RISK: LIABILITY

A photographer, using a drone to shoot overhead photos of a wedding, loses control of the drone. It hits a wedding guest, causing injury to the guest.

THE SOLUTION: OUR LIABILITY COVERAGE

The Hartford's unmanned aircraft liability coverage can help pay for bodily injury, property damage and personal injury expenses resulting from the operation of your drone - up to the policy's business liability limit.
